2018 Northwest League Champions
Eugene Emeralds

The Northwest League has now completed its 6th season since its inception in 1955. Including its predecessor leagues, the NWL has existed since 1901. Because major-league baseball did not arrive on the west coast until the late 1950's, minor-league baseball prospered in the Northwest. Cities like Tacoma played the same role Eugene, Salem-Keizer, and Spokane do today.

Portland was the first champion of the Pacific Northwest league which was in existence in 1901-02. Butte won the first championship in the Pacific National League which operated in 1903-04. The Northwestern League then came into play and lasted until 1918. Vancouver won five championships with Seattle getting four during this time. Everett shared the first crown with Vancouver while Aberdeen won the 1907 title outright. Spokane was the league champ in 1910 and 1916.

The Pacific Coast International League followed from 1919-22 before a 15-year drought occurred. The Western International League followed in 1937 and lasted until 1954 when it disappeared at a Friday-Saturday meeting and was replaced by the Northwest League on Sunday. Charter members of the present Northwest League include Eugene and Spokane. The predecessor leagues operated under the "Class B" designation while the modern league is called "short-season Class A".

Over the last 50 years the Northwest League has produced some of the best talent ever seen. The following is a list of some of the players that went on to play in the major leagues: Sandy Alomar, Ozzie smith, Tony Gwynn, Mike Piazza, Kevin Appier, Pedro Astacio, Rod Beck, Jose Canseco, Eric Davis, George Foster, Julio Franco, Ken Griffey, Jr., Pedro Guerrero, Dave Henderson, Rickey Henderson, Reggie Jackson, Jeffrey Leonard, Rick Monday, Terry Mulholland, Eduardo Perez, Tim Salmon, Mike Scioscia, Terry Steinbach, Dave Stewart, Rick Sutcliffe, Matt Williams, Mitch Williams, and Trevor Wilson.

Since its creation in 1954, the Northwest League has had various Presidents as follows:

2019 will be Mike Ellis' seventh year as President of the Northwest League. Ellis has been involved in Minor League Baseball for more than 20 years. His baseball experience includes the ownership of three baseball franchises, he has been the Vice President of two leagues, served a term on the MiLB Board of Trustees, and has served as member of MiLB committees. As part of his team involvement he has negotiated the construction of two new stadiums .

Ellis has degrees in Civil Engineering Technology and Urban Studies, and two years of post-graduate study in Urban and Regional Planning. His 40 years of non-baseball experience includes the better part of 20 years with a highly regarded community developer.

The Ellis family has been involved in Minor League Baseball since 1984 when Mike's wife Judy became involved. Judy was named the Rawlings Woman Executive of the year in 1999. His son Matt, a 25 year veteran of Minor League Baseball, has been a League Executive of the Year in two Leagues.

Andy Dunn, Vice President

Scotiabank Field at Nat Bailey Stadium, 4601 Ontario Street

Andy Dunn has been with the Vancouver Canadians since 2008, helping guide Canada's only affiliated Minor League Baseball franchise to a number of national accolades including the coveted John H. Johnson President's Trophy (2013) presented to the most complete franchise in MiLB - marking the first time in the award's 40-year history that a Canadian-based organization received the honor.

Known by many in the baseball world, Andy has twice been named Florida State League Executive of the Year (1999, 2000) and Northwest League Executive of the Year (2008) and has helped the Canadians reach new heights with ten Northwest League awards during his tenure in Vancouver including multiple John H. Johnson & Larry MacPhail Awards.

In addition to his many duties in Vancouver, Andy is also President of the Lancaster JetHawks of the California League.

Jerry Walker, Secretary

Jerry Walker enters his 30th season in the Northwest League having spent more than a decade as Principal Owner of the Salem-Keizer Volcanoes. In 1997, Walker was named the NWL Executive of the Year and also received the prestigious Joe Martin Award. The University of Washington graduate was instrumental in bringing baseball back to the mid-Willamette Valley as he spearheaded a private/public partnership to build a professional baseball stadium in Keizer, Oregon. He and his wife Lisa reside in Keizer along with their son Mickey.

DID YOU KNOW?

A look back at those who helped mold the Northwest League

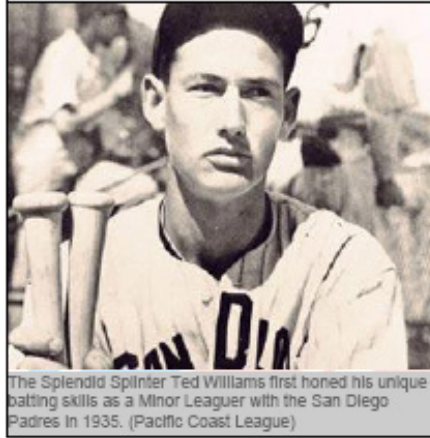

Former Northwest League Umpire-In-Chief Bob Albrecht, now 84 years old, once handled 80 NWL games in 70 days. The native of Illinois will be inducted into the Vallejo Sports Hall of Fame this summer after a lengthy career behind the mask. Why Vallejo, California's Hall of Fame when he's originally from the Midwest? A 39-year career in education at the high school level helped pay the bills while Albrecht pursued his dreams as an umpire.

History & Function of Minor League Baseball

The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, now known as Minor League Baseball, was formed on September 5, 1901 from a meeting of Minor League executives at the Leland Hotel in Chicago. The President of the Eastern League, Patrick T. Powers, was elected as the first President of the NAPBL. Fourteen leagues and 96 clubs were members during the first season in 1902. The first NA office was established in Auburn, N.Y., under President Powers and successfully run by Secretary-Treasurer John H. Farrell. By the time Powers left office in 1909, there were 35 leagues and 246 clubs. In 1910, Michael Sexton became President. In his first few years, wars between the Major Leagues and the outlaw Federal League hurt the Minors. The Federal League raided top Minor League teams, as well as National and American League teams, for players and territory. Sexton led a fight at the 1914 Winter Meetings to fight off a bid from radicals for the Minor Leagues to desert the Major Leagues and back the Federal League. For 22 years, Sexton presided over the Minor Leagues, leaving at the height of the Depression in 1932. But during his time, peace was restored and the Minor Leagues began to flourish. Trautman moved the office to Columbus, Ohio, as he began a 16-year reign as President. The year 1949 saw 59 leagues and 448 clubs, both all-time highs, attract 39,640,443 fans, a record that stood for 54 years. However, the advent of television and, in Trautman's last two years, Major League expansion, would begin to cut into attendance. There were 20 leagues and 132 clubs in 1964 and attendance was only 10 million. By the time Piton left office in 1971, membership was back to 155 clubs.

The Splendid Splinter Ted Williams first honed his unique batting skills as a Minor Leaguer with the San Diego Padres in 1935. (Pacific Coast League)

With the election of Henry J. Peters as President in December 1971, the NA was headed for another move. In September 1973, the office found its fourth home on Fourth Street South in St. Petersburg, Fla. Peters left in 1975 to become General Manager of the Baltimore Orioles. Robert R. "Bobby" Bragan became President in January 1976, and by 1978 there were 158 clubs. Mike Moore, who had been Chief Administrative Officer of the NA, was elected President during the 1991 Baseball Winter Meetings. One of his first moves after taking over in January 1992, was to convene a constitutional convention that would rewrite the National Association Agreement, the by-laws that spell out the relationship between the NA and its member leagues. It was an agreement that had not materially changed in nearly a century of existence.

The NA had phenomenal growth under the leadership of Moore, who retired in December 2007, after 16 years as President. In 1991, prior to becoming President, he established an agency agreement partnership between the Professional Baseball Promotion Corporation, a NAPBL subsidiary, and Major League Baseball Properties to authorize licensed merchandise on an international basis. From a humble beginning in the early 1990s, merchandise sales have averaged about $45-million since 2000. The Promo Corp. branched out into national marketing in 1993, providing a central office that allows national sponsors to work with any number of Minor League teams on a local level or in any combination up to a national program.

Joe DiMaggio, who debuted as shortstop with the 1932 San Francisco Seals, had a career average of .398 in the Minor Leagues. (Pacific Coast League) the historic 10-year Professional Baseball Agreement that was negotiated with Major League Baseball. Minor League Baseball celebrated its centennial season in 2001 by attracting 38,808,339 fans, its third highest total in history at the time.

Minor League Baseball has been a continuing success story at the box office. The 2008 regular season attendance total of 43,263,740, established a new all-time record for the fifth straight year. Total regular season attendance has increased in 24 of the last 29 seasons and has surpassed 33-million for 16 straight years, a level not attained since the late 1940s when membership consisted of more than 50 leagues and more than 400 teams. In 2009, there were 15 leagues with 176 teams that charged admission. Another important function of the National Association office is the running of Baseball's annual Winter Meetings, the convention of professional baseball, in conjunction with the Commissioner's Office. At the Winter Meetings, the Promo Corp. conducts the annual Baseball Trade Show, where merchandisers and manufacturers display the goods that will fill stadium novelty stands and souvenir shops in the year ahead, and conducts business seminars for member teams. The Promo Corp. also runs Professional Baseball Employment Opportunities (PBEO), which assists candidates seeking jobs in pro baseball. Pat O'Conner took over as Minor League Baseball's 11th President in January 2008. He was elected to a four-year term, after serving as Chief Operating Officer, Moore's top aide, for 15 years. Highlights of O'Conner's first two years in office include

Willie Mays first played Minor League ball in Trenton, N.J., and then Minneapolis before getting called up by the Giants in 1951. (International League)

the realignment of two Class A leagues; the organization-wide bundling of internet rights; satellite operations and training centers at the historic Dodgertown complex in Vero Beach, Fla., and at the historic Durham Athletic Park in Durham, N.C.; expanded member input through revised organizational committee structure; a first-ever Diversity Initiative; a "Green Team" initiative to make Minor League Baseball teams and stadiums more eco-friendly and cost effective; and the location of new office space comprised of three buildings, totaling 14,000 square feet, on 16th Street North in St. Petersburg, Fla.
